

Proposed Amended Claim 1

1. (Currently Amended) A method of reporting a changed service option in a mobile communication system, comprising:

transmitting a message type, a channel number representing a communication path being used, encryption information, and contents of the changed service option from a base station/base station controller (BS/BSC) to a mobile switching center after a service re-negotiation procedure is performed between a mobile station and the BS/BSC, wherein the service re-negotiation procedure occurs after the mobile switching center has been notified about an initially negotiated service option, [[and]] after the mobile station, the BS/BSC and the mobile switching center has entered into a busy state using the initially negotiated service option, and at any time during an existing call.

wherein the service re-negotiation is selectively initiated by a mobile station or a base station

wherein the changed service options are included in a newly new message not previously defined call.

• Creating a Service option Report to include the Changed service options a Asynchronous complete message including the changed service options and a message type;

• Transmitting the service option Report from the base station to the MSC.
